Over 820,000 people live with dementia in the UK, a number forecast to increase massively. As the UK's leading dementia research charity, the Alzheimer's Research Trust funds more world-class dementia research than anyone else. As the number of people with dementia rises, there is an urgent need to develop new treatments. Our scientists have been at the forefront of some of the biggest breakthroughs and research success stories of recent times. Each year we commit to more grants, and with over 140 projects supported across the UK right now, our understanding of dementia and how to defeat it becomes more complete every day. "We're thrilled to be this year's sponsor of the Sparkle & Shine Ball - the ball is an exciting way of bringing business and charity together and it's a great opportunity for Golley Slater to become more involved with the business community. We're particularly pleased to support The Alzheimer's Research Trust because dementia touches so many people's lives today. One of our clients is involved in dementia care for older people, so we are aware of the many challenges and have great empathy with the charity's work. I hope the auction raises a substantial amount of money for the charity. "
